Question 5. Why did the Nawabs of Awadh and Bengal try to do away with the jagirdari system?

Solution:

The Nawabs of Awadh and Bengal tried to do away with the jagirdari system because they wanted to put a curb on cheating as well as the Mughal influence in their kingdoms. The jagirdars appointed by Mughals were corrupt, so the Nawabs reduced the size of jagirs and appointed loyal servants to complete the tasks.

They checked the jagirdar's accounts and the districts' revenues were reassessed by officials appointed by the Nawab's court.

Question 6. How were the Sikhs organized in the eighteenth century?

Solution:

In the eighteenth century, the Sikhs organized themselves into a number of bands called jathas, and later misls. Their combined forces were known as the grand army (dal khalsa). The entire body used to meet at Amritsar at the time of Baisakhi and Diwali to take collective decisions known as "resolutions of the Guru (gurmata)". A system called rakhi was introduced, offering protection to cultivators on the payment of a tax of 20 per cent of the produce.

Guru Gobind Singh created the khalsa that helped Sikhs defeat the Mughal governors first and then Ahmad Shah Abdali who had seized the rich province of the Punjab and the Sarkar of Sirhind from the Mughals.

Question 7. Why did the Marathas want to expand beyond the Deccan?

The Marathas wanted to expand beyond the Deccan to receive tribute and control trade and agriculture. They had built a rich and effective administrative system, so they could think of expanding beyond the Deccan for more power and resources.

Question 8. What were the policies adopted by Asaf Jah to strengthen his position?

Solution:

Nizam-ul-Mulk Asaf Jah, the founder of Hyderabad state, was one of the most powerful members at the court of the Mughal Emperor, Farrukh Siyar. To strengthen his position, Asaf Jah:

- brought skilled soldiers and administrators from northern India who welcomed the new opportunities in the south.
- appointed mansabdars and granted jagirs.
- ruled quite independently without seeking any direction from Delhi or facing any interference. The Mughal emperor merely confirmed the decisions already taken by the Nizam.
- gathered power by taking advantage of the turmoil in the Deccan and the competition amongst the court nobility.
